

Diane Cahill

Licensed Physical Therapist

Northwestern University
Early Intervention Evaluator & Direct Service Specialist

Diane Cahill PT is a licensed physical therapist with over 35 years of experience. After graduating from Northwestern University she has practiced in a variety of settings in three states. Since 1993 she has been associated with Kreider Services, Inc. Early Intervention Program. She currently is credentialed by the State of Illinois as an Early Intervention evaluator and direct service specialist. As a physical therapist, Diane focuses on the development of gross motor skills. She looks at the child's movement as they progress from rolling to sitting, creeping, walking, running and jumping. Even though she focuses on gross motor skills, she does treat the whole child and coordinates care with other professional members on your child's team. She encourages parents or caretakers to actively participate in their child's treatment and provides activities that they can implement at home.
